AUTHOR

Mary Mackey is a best selling author of fourteen books and eight collections of poetry. She admires women who are willing to fight for what they believe in. Almost without exception her heroines plunge passionately into life, searching for love and happiness, defending the earth, and seeking a moral center during difficult times. Her novels deal with different cultures, political unrest in the US in the 1960's and comedy.

She graduated from Harvard and received her Ph.D. in Comparative Literature from the University of Michigan. She retired as Professor Emeritus of English from California State University Sacramento.
